

Pathfinder Solutions Systems Engineering Mentoring

Improve quality and productivity with advanced model-based systems engineering training and techniques

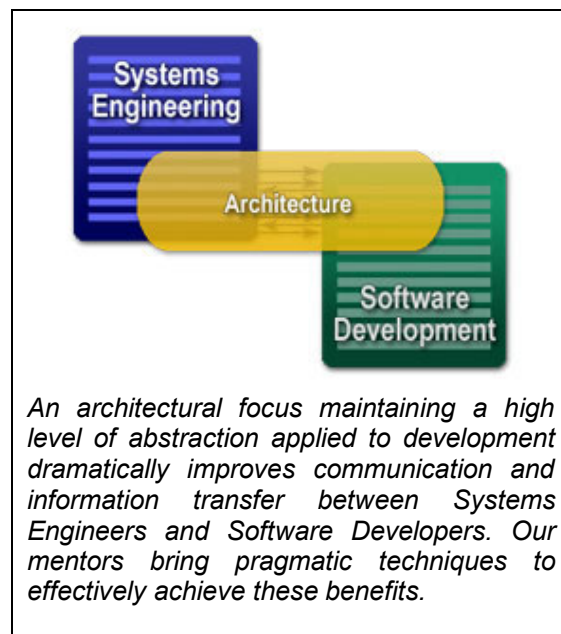

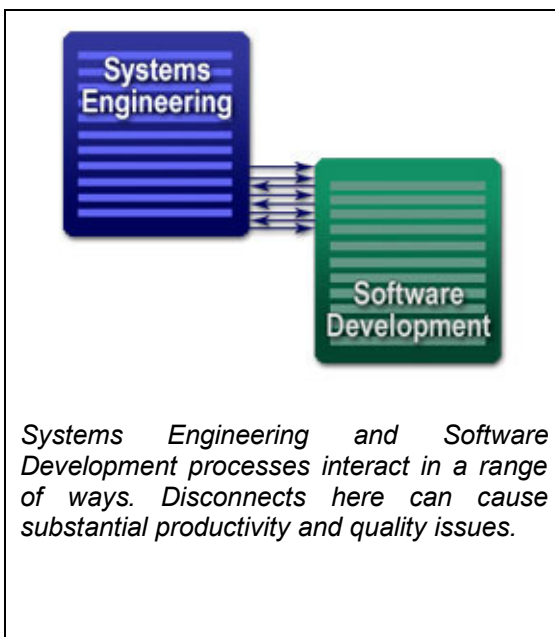

Minimize risk and accelerate adoption with Pathfinder Solutions' expertise in field-proven approaches for model-based systems engineering. We help system engineers successfully adopt and deploy highly effective model-based systems engineering techniques for complex high-performance, embedded and real-time systems.

Generate Results with Proven Leadership

With over a decade of experience on real-world projects, Pathfinder Solutions offers expert training and mentoring services to help systems engineers learn, apply and master model-based development techniques. With a results-oriented focus, systems engineers can substantially improve overall system quality and total productivity of their model-based efforts.

Architecture: The Bridge from Systems Engineering to Software Development

Systems engineers can achieve these benefits by applying an effective model-based approach to systems engineering. The basic pillars of SysML - Requirements, Structure, Behavior, and Parametrics – help build a concise and effective foundation for systems engineering. By maintaining a balanced relationship with software development through an architectural level of abstraction, communication and information transfer between systems engineers and software developers improves dramatically. Our deep experience in the confluence of Systems Engineering and Software Development brings proven techniques to this challenging realm.
